

College Fairs/College Tours

At a college fair, you can gather general information about your schools of interest... anything from majors offered to life on campus. Even better, standing face-to-face with a college rep allows you to go beyond general inquiries; you can ask questions that are unique to your circumstances and possibly create a moment for you to stand out. And, believe it or not, colleges keep track of how much interest prospective students express in attending their institution. Therefore, attending a college fair and getting face time with a college representative from your school of choice can actually make a difference in your likelihood of being accepted to that school. Call it “extra credit”...in the competitive landscape of college admissions, every little bit counts!

IMPORTANT, CONSIDER A COLLEGE TOUR:

It's difficult to get a full and accurate sense of a place virtually or through brochures from a college fair. And when you're choosing a college, one of the most impactful decisions, it's crucial to physically experience where you will grow and live for those formative years. In addition, students who visit a college before they apply, are up to 40 percent more likely to be admitted than students who do not visit or show demonstrated interest.
